Introduction and special features

Joint Honours programmes give students the opportunity to combine two subjects from a range of areas in a structured way. The selected pairings are designed to complement one another and allow you to have a significant amount of choice and flexibility in relation to your learning experience. In addition, Joint Honours will engage you in a range of learning and teaching experiences and assessment opportunities.

Education Studies

Education Studies is concerned with understanding how people develop and learn throughout their lives, and the nature of knowledge and critical engagement with ways of knowing and understanding. It offers intellectually rigorous analysis of educational processes, systems and approaches, and their cultural, societal, political, historical, and economic contexts.

Graduates are able to participate in and contest changing discourses exemplified by reference to debate about values, personal and social engagement, and how these relate to communities and societies. You will have opportunities to develop your critical capabilities through the selection, analysis and synthesis of relevant perspectives, and be able to justify different positions on educational matters. You will engage in a critique of current policies and practice and challenge assumptions. Education Studies provides the knowledge, understanding and critical analysis to inform current and future professionals.

Education Studies is built around a number of key dispositions that the team wishes to develop with our students. Change is a constant, in that all students need to be prepared for change, and that change will happen no matter what. The important thing is to be able to understand this. Critique enables you to deal with change; it allows you to question why things are as they are, who is driving change, and to engage with your own responses to this. Creativity allows you to look at the world in a number of ways, not just accepting it as it is, and also looking for different ways to respond to it. Curiosity is about wanting to find out more, and to understand yourself and others, and to know how to find out in a coherent and ethical manner. Through change, critique, creativity and curiosity, it is hoped that Education Studies students will care about themselves, others and the environment, and to challenge both themselves and others in their ongoing quest to understand themselves and the world as it is, as it could be, and as it should be.

English Literature

English Literature is a rich and vibrant area of study. At YSJU, we are a dynamic, engaged, and research-active team who are committed to providing our students with a cutting-edge education. By studying English Literature, you will have the opportunity to learn about a range of different genres, historical periods, and literary forms. Our philosophy is simple: words matter. Words shape the world we live in (books can and have changed the world) and the connections between the written page and the concerns of the 'real' world are a crucial part of the programme. Overall, the degree will enable you to develop your expertise as a reader and critic of a range of literary materials, whilst also supporting you in the development of a portfolio of professional skills which will aid you in the wider job market. As you become adept at independent learning, you will become a more sophisticated reader of texts, and you will find that your confidence as a writer and as a critic will increase as your degree progresses.

Through the course of a wide-ranging suite of modules, you will develop an extensive knowledge of both classic and contemporary texts, and will have the opportunity to gain some professional experience on our dedicated employability module, Literature at Work should you choose to select it. The choice of modules on offer will help you to develop your own interests and allow you to shape your degree accordingly. For example, students can choose to follow an historical pathway that might include modules such as Revolution and Response, which examines writing from the late eighteenth century and early nineteenth century, or The Victorian Novel, which focuses on nineteenth-century fiction. In addition, students can focus on other specialised areas represented by modules including Mapping America, Sick Novels: Literature and Disease, Science Fiction for Survival, and Gothic Origins. We pride ourselves on a diverse and stimulating syllabus, and you might find yourself studying Native American writing, prison narratives, radical poetry, avant-garde writing, political polemics, Civil Rights literature, speculative fiction, LGBT rights literature, experimental writing, and literature of the Caribbean, as well as canonical writers such as Shakespeare, Dickens, and Austen, all as part of your English Literature degree.

A team of research-active academics who are all recognised in their respective specialisms will facilitate and guide your learning. Field trips are an integral part of the programme, and students in recent years have had the opportunity to visit London, Stratford-upon-Avon, and Whitby, as well as local sites including Castle Howard and York Theatre Royal.

During your degree, you will develop a range of subject-specific and transferable skills. As well as having the opportunity to become an adept reader, critic, writer, writer and researcher, you will also become highly skilled in critical thinking, problem solving, constructing and developing an argument, time-management, public speaking, and project management. Students regularly contribute to our popular Literature blog, Point Zero, which is an excellent way to gain relevant professional experience and exposure for your critical and creative perspectives.

Admissions criteria

You must meet the minimum entry requirements which are published on the programme specific webpage.

If your first language is not English, you need to take an IELTS test or an equivalent qualification accepted by the University (see <https://www.yorksj.ac.uk/international/how-to-apply/english-language-requirements/>).

If you do not have traditional qualifications, you may be eligible for entry on the basis of Accredited Prior \(Experiential\) Learning \(APL/APEL\). We also consider applications for entry with advanced standing.

Learning, teaching and assessment

Teaching and learning strategies will be tailored towards the context of each module. Learning and teaching methods are designed to enable you to attain and demonstrate achievement of the specified programme learning outcomes. Education Studies uses a diverse range of teaching and learning strategies which will focus on equipping you with the skills and knowledge required to be effective and successful students. Education Studies is designed so that there is a progressive shift in the overall balance of time you spend in independent compared to tutor-supported learning. Level 4 has increased contact time to ensure that you have a sound grounding in the subject area, which is then gradually reduced through Levels 5 and 6 in order to develop student autonomy, whilst still providing a supportive environment.

The teaching and learning strategy includes lectures, seminars, case studies, group work, report writing and aims to be accessible to a mixture of learning styles and interactive activities. A series of key lectures for each module will provide you with an introduction to the main themes, theoretical concepts and debates. Seminars aim to provide you with the opportunity to debate and discuss the themes raised by lectures and self-directed study. This will provide you with opportunities to have a deeper understanding of the issues covered in the modules and encourages an environment in which you can communicate and discuss the subject matter with other students.

You will also be encouraged to take the initiative and work towards a self-directed approach under the negotiation, facilitation and observation of the module leader. Guest speakers from appropriate organisations also enhance the lecture sessions.

The following learning and teaching strategies will provide opportunities for engagement, development and critical enquiry:

- Web-based study materials
- Virtual Learning Environment tasks
- Individual/group tutorials
- Web-based mediated discussion groups
- Learning journals
- Simulation exercises

- Project work (tutor-set and student-initiated)
- Field trips and course visits

There is an appropriate blend of formative feedback and summative assessments across the individual modules. This is emphasised at Level 4 whereby the word count of 3,000 per module is for the summative assessment, but in order to ease the transition into academic study within Higher Education there will also be formative feedback, which may be written or verbal. This will be particularly apparent in semester 1, as the modules support each other in developing the skills you need to succeed in Higher Education. In this respect, formative feedback will be provided prior to submission of the final summative assessment, which maximises the potential for you to engage in productive dialogue throughout the module. Formal and informal feedback including reviews and discussion will also be used to inform you of your progress and facilitate learning and personal development planning. Assessment criteria are directly related to the specified learning outcomes for the programme of study. Academic Tutorials will also support the feedback process, as your academic tutor discusses your feedback with you and suggests support as necessary.

We believe that self-motivation has a crucial role to play in learning. What motivates us and how other people can influence our self-motivation is a very complex area, but one in which our understanding is growing. We now know that success itself does not necessarily motivate. It depends to a great extent on why we think we have been successful in our learning. Even the performance of very able students can plateau or even diminish if they believe that they have reached what they consider to be the limits of their intelligence i.e. that their level of intelligence is fixed and they are powerless to increase their capacity to learn.

Ultimately, being wrong, making mistakes and struggling to understand or to do something is a necessary and formative part of learning. Formative tasks are also an integral part of the Level 5 and 6 modules so that you can receive informal feedback on both your academic work and the development of critical thinking around the subjects under discussion. Here, feedback is seen as a key tool that can support you in refining your understandings and/or knowledge as well as enabling you to build more powerful ideas and capabilities.

Learning, teaching and assessment

The aims of all our teaching is to help you to become a better writer and literary critic, to challenge you to consider new ideas and concepts, and to support you in understanding the complex connections between literature and contemporary society. Literature is a dialogic discipline: that is, informed discussions and debates are a crucial part of the learning process. We do not want students to be passive learners, but instead expect you all to be actively engaged and involved with your degree subject.

We use a range of teaching styles and settings to help support you during your time at University. You will attend lectures, seminars (groups of students with a tutor), tutorials (one-to-one meetings with a tutor), workshops, and experience collaborative learning (working with your fellow students), events, field trips, as well as independent study sessions, and times when you will need to use online resources through the University's Virtual Learning Environment.

Your first year with us is about supporting you in making the transition to university-level study. You will be assigned your own Academic Tutor, a member of staff who will meet with you and other students on a weekly basis during your first semester at YSJU. Modules such as the optional module Writing, Research and Literature have been specially designed to help you adapt to the University environment and the requirements of the subject. As you progress to your second and third year, you will be able to shape your degree according to your own research interests. You can choose to specialise in a certain genre, historical period, or literary form. We have a diverse range of modules for you to choose from, and you will have lots of opportunities to study types of literature that you might not have experienced previously (such as, for example, Caribbean literature, utopian writing, and creative non-fiction). We offer an interdisciplinary approach to the study of literature, and you might find yourself studying a film or media adaptation of a text, or considering a specific performance of a play, as well as reading the original source material.

There are no exams, and your English Literature degree will be assessed through coursework. As well as writing essays, however, there are other assessment opportunities designed to help you develop new skills and prepare for graduate employment. You will encounter a wide range of assessment, including portfolios, close-reading exercises, and opportunities for reflective writing. Some modules are assessed by one piece of coursework (usually a portfolio) and you will have the chance to work on this throughout the semester. The feedback you will receive focuses on how you can improve your work for future assessment, and we encourage all students to keep a feedback folder to help keep track of their academic development. You will have the chance to work with published and professional writers, as our resident Royal Literary Fellow is available for additional tutorials and writing support.

In your final year, you will be ready to take on a bigger role in the management of your learning. You might find yourself leading a class discussion, or doing a non-assessed presentation in a seminar. If you choose to take the Literature dissertation (an extended project that runs for the whole academic year) you will write on the subject of your choice, with the support of an academic supervisor. In many ways, this is in the intellectual culmination of your degree, as you become an independent researcher and are required to manage your own academic project. Many of our students note that this is one of the most enjoyable sections of their degree, as they are specialising in a literary topic that they are passionate about, and are putting into practice the skills they have accrued during their time at York St John University.
